DIRES GASHU

Instructional Designer & Corporate Trainer

★ Young Innovator Award Winner, Great Rift Valley

PREFACE

Some of the most important knowledge is locked behind jargon: human rights, fair work, national policy, civic participation. Since 2021 my work has been to build the key, turning complex technical and policy content into learning that people finish, understand and use. From classrooms in Addis Ababa to TVET learners in Hawassa and Dilla through GIZ, and from UNICEF and the Ministry of Education to the National Election Board, every project has taught me to design with the learner first. Today I also mentor other designers, because good practice grows when it is shared.

PROFILE

Award-winning Instructional Designer and Corporate Trainer with a proven record designing, developing and digitalizing training materials for government institutions, UN agencies and NGOs across Ethiopia. Young Innovator Award winner from the Great Rift Valley for translating complex technical, human-rights and professional-development content into engaging, competency-based multimedia curricula, blended learning experiences and interactive digital courses. Skilled at leading end-to-end learning design, from needs analysis and curriculum architecture to LMS deployment, for stakeholders ranging from grassroots TVET learners to UNICEF, the Ethiopian Human Rights Commission and the National Election Board. Combines project-management discipline with hands-on digital production skills, focused on decent work, fair employment, inclusion and sustainable development.
